Kinkajous vs. Winnie the Pooh Fact Sheets

Kinkajous and Winnie the Pooh both like honey. They're both referred to as "the honey bear." However, they are two very different creatures. Read these facts to learn more!

Facts about Winnie the Pooh. Winnie the Pooh:
- Lives inside a tree in The Hundred Acre Wood
- Has yellow fur and soft paws
- Wears a red shirt
- Eats honey
- Is diurnal (sleeping at night)
- Has a lot of friends

Facts about the kinkajou. These facts were gathered from the Carolina Tiger Rescue in   North Carolina. A kinkajou:
- Lives in the rainforest
- Lives on the tops of trees
- Has thick, brown fur
- Has sharp claws
- Has sharp teeth
- Has a long powerful tail
- Has a long tongue
- Eats nectar, insects and frogs
- Is nocturnal (awake at night)
- Is born in tree holes
- Is related to the Raccoon
- Is aggressive
- Babies are called = "kits"
- Babies hiss when they're scared
- Moms chirp to comfort their baby

Kinkajous vs. Winnie the Pooh Fact Sheet

Kinkajous and Winnie the Pooh both like honey. They're both referred to as "the honey bear." However, they are two very different characters. Read these facts to learn more!

Facts about Winnie the Pooh. Winnie the Pooh:
- Lives inside a tree in The Hundred Acre Wood
- Has yellow fur and soft paws
- Wears a red shirt
- Eats honey
- Is diurnal (sleeping at night)
- Has a lot of friends

Facts about the kinkajou. These facts were gathered from the Carolina Tiger Rescue in   North Carolina. A kinkajou:
- Lives in the rainforest
- Lives on the tops of trees
- Has thick, brown fur
- Has sharp claws
- Has sharp teeth
- Has a long powerful tail
- Has a long tongue
- Eats nectar, insects and frogs
- Is nocturnal (awake at night)
- Is born in tree holes
- Is related to the Raccoon
- Is aggressive
- Babies are called = "kits"
- Babies hiss when they're scared

Information in the above boxes was gathered from the following sources:
https://carolinatigerrescue.org/species/kinkajou/ and the Winnie the Pooh Series, written by A.A.Milne